Vote will raise taxes 50 per cent

A Randall County commission vote Friday will raise county taxes about 50 per cent for 1976. Commissioners voted to leave the tax rate at $1.05 per $100 valuation. They had voted two weeks ago to raise the tax ratio from 17 per cent to 25 per cent of market value.

Mrs. Audrey Bruse, tax collector, said Friday the action will mean a tax increase of about $16 on a $25,000 home. About 35,000 notices of the increase will be sent county property owners during the next two weeks before the commissioners meet as a board of equalization on Aug. 11.

Commissioners set the tax rate to raise about $100,000 more than they anticipate needing during 1976 to finance county government. Anticipated revenue with the increase will total $1,739,700, well above the revenue estimate for 1975 of $1.3 million.

Commissioners passed the tax hike before going into a marathon six and a half hour session during which they examined each county department budget. They fashioned the tax hike around a tentative speculative figure of $1.6 in expenditures for the coming year.

County Auditor Betty Hodges reported to commissioners early in the meeting she had not yet begun work on estimating expenditures for the county for 1976.

Faced with a time deadline of early next week, however, commissioners decided to go ahead and set the tax rates.

Mrs. Hodges reported that with the 25 per cent ratio applied to the market value with a rate of $1.05 — the same rate in effect for 1975 — the county could raise an additional $395,253 for the 1976 budget.

All revenues, with the increase in ratio, she said, would amount to $1,739,702.

In 1975, receipts for the county totalled $1,311,000.

Expenditures for 1975 were expected to total $1,341,000 in the current year's budget, but Commissioners Dee Griffin and John Fulgenzi noted that at best the county expenditures will run 18 per cent more than that figure by Jan. 1, 1976.

Griffin said he figures the total expenditures for this year will amount to about $1,583 million — or about $200,000 over the budgeted expenditure figure.

Mrs. Hodges reported that based strictly on county department head budget requests — requests which had not been scrutinized for possible cuts — the county could expect expenditures for 1976 of about $1.52 million.

But, she also reported that the county must set aside $101,000 for the interest and sinking fund to help pay off obligation bonds for the construction of the new South Amarillo courthouse annex.

At the outside, she said, county expenditures would be about $1.6 million for 1976.

Commissioners had determined two weeks ago that normal growth in the county would not provide enough additional tax money to finance the growth in county expenditures. Mrs. Audrey Bruse, tax collector, had said at that time the county could expect an increase in the tax roll of only about $15,000 for 1976.

After reviewing the expenditure estimates and the revenues which could be anticipated from a 25 per cent ratio and $1.05 rate, Fulgenzi suggested the $1.05 rate be adjusted downward an amount which would give the county only the $1.6 needed to finance county business during 1976.

Griffin, however, contended the tax rate should remain at $1.05 with the 25 per cent ratio so the county would be assured of funding to fight inflationary trends.

Hunsley trash collection policy should remain as is--Metcalf

City Manager Glen Metcalf is expected to recommend to city commissioners Monday night that a new city policy requiring Hunsley Hills residents to place their trash cans at curbside for pick-up not be changed.

In memoranda to commissioners prior to the Monday meeting, Metcalf recommends commissioners stand by a policy they handed down in May to become effective in June, a policy which has been attacked by Hunsley residents.

Metcalf's recommendation comes after commissioners instructed him to re-evaluate the trash pick-up system in the subdivision, which has no alleys.

The current policy, which requires Hunsley residents to place garbage at curbside "is a beginning, a very small but necessary one, in the process of streamlining and modification that must be necessary in our solid waste collection system," Metcalf says. "If a change in policy were allowed in Hunsley Hills then it must also be allowed in other areas of the city if requested. The economic impact of this would be tremendous."

Noting that the sanitation budget had a $19,000 deficit for 1974-75, Metcalf said the city must increase efficiency and efficient use of manpower in trash collection and should eventually look to full containerization for a fiscal answer.

But, in analyzing the trash pick-up in Hunsley Hills specifically, he noted that city trash collectors spent twice the time now spent when they were required to gather garbage cans from various house locations in Hunsley Hills.

"This fact in itself is significant enough to justify the change in the service," he says. "Human resources, like economic resources, are scarce and the competition for the allocation of these are tremendous."

Curbside pickup of trash in the subdivision, he says, saves almost 10 man-weeks of time in one year, time which would be lost were the city to return to the old trash pick-up system in Hunsley Hills.

Metcalf has also figured the cost per household which the city might charge should the city policy be reversed. The amount, he says, is about $4.36 per household over and above current sanitation rates.

"However," he says, "it must be noted that if the number of households increase to the extent that additional work hours are needed, and as operational costs increase, this figure would have to be upwardly readjusted periodically."

Hunsley Hills residents appeared en masse in late June before commissioners, asking them to reverse their new policy of curbside pickup.

Other business scheduled for the commission meeting includes consideration of approval of an

City way behind in financing recreation areas, group says

The City of Canyon is far behind other cities in the Texas Panhandle in providing parks and recreational facilities for citizens, an ad hoc parks and recreation committee will tell local city commissioners Monday night.

Members of the committee met Thursday night to finalize a presentation to the city commission, but altered their original intention of requesting as much as $75,000 from the city for park expansion.

Rather, the group will ask commissioners to appoint a permanent committee to study parks and recreation, with the hope of beginning some expansion project within the very near future.

Phil Langen of the Canyon Chamber of Commerce and chairman of the ad hoc group, outlined the results of a survey taken of various Panhandle cities for comparison purposes.

A summary of the results: DUMAS—A city of 9771 population, Dumas provides 11 tennis courts, five baseball diamonds and the city itself provides maintenance of all park areas. The city has eight parks with one main park and a $59,000 annual budget for recreation.

HEREFORD—A city of 16,000 population, Hereford has six current tennis courts with eight under construction. Three baseball diamonds are provided and the city maintains all facilities. Hereford has one main park and 14 neighborhood parks. The city budget for parks and recreation is $206,000.

PERRYTON—Perryton, with a population of 8500, has eight tennis courts and three baseball diamonds. It has one main park and two smaller parks and a $91,600 annual parks and recreation budget.

BORGER—With 18,000 population, Borger provides 12 tennis courts and 12 baseball diamonds along with a main park and 23 neighborhood parks.

The city budgets $90,000 annually for parks and recreation.

PORTALES—Portales, with a population of 10,500, provides 12 tennis courts, three ball diamonds, two main parks and one neighborhood park, and a parks and recreation budget of $74,000.

PAMPA—Pampa has a population of 23,000 and provides 16 tennis courts, 14 baseball diamonds, 250 acres of parks and a budget of $250,000 for parks and recreation.

McClendon asks more, gets less

Randall County Treasurer Bob McClendon asked for the most but wound up with the least as county commissioners worked out department budgets Friday.

McClendon, who ran on a platform last November promising to abolish his office if elected, asked commissioners for a 100 per cent increase in allocation for his office — from $12,000 for 1975 to $22,000 for 1976.

He also asked for a 43 per cent hike in salary from about $8400 in 1975 to $12,000 in 1976. His request for salary increase was the largest examined by commissioners Friday.

Commissioners didn't think much of McClendon's request and chopped it to $12,791, allowing only for a six per cent salary increase.

Discussion of McClendon's budget put the focus again on a rift between

Coordinating board oks fine arts construction

The state coordinating board for colleges and universities approved Friday morning construction of a $4.2 million fine arts complex on the West Texas State University campus.

Bids are expected to be opened and a contract let for the structure during a September meeting of the WTSU board of regents.

Approval from the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System was the final hurdle faced by WTSU officials in a three-year planning effort to construct a new fine arts facility.

Dr. Lloyd Watkins, university president, said late Friday, he was "very pleased" with the action taken by the state board. "This will mean a great deal for the area," he said. "It will be a very fine cultural center and we have a number of them."

Watkins travelled to Austin Wednesday along with Hermas Miller, financial vice president, Dr. Ray A. Malzahn, academic vice president, and Dr. John Green, dean of the school of fine arts, to appear before the board.

Unanimous approval of the project was given Thursday morning by a facilities subcommittee of the board. The board vote Friday morning was also unanimous.

The approval of the project came after the board adopted the policy to guide them in similar decisions. The interim policy provided that approval would be given buildings where the universities were so committed that denial of construction would work an undue hardship, according to a board spokesman.

The spokesman said the board decided what with the monetary commitments already made by WTSU for construction of the fine arts center a denial of construction would work an undue hardship.

The board also approved the rehabilitation of the old administration building, which was damaged by fire in June. But, they made no comment on how the construction should be

Health team due here to locate building site

A three- or four-man team from the State Board of Health will be in Canyon and Amarillo July 28-29 to investigate possible sites for location of a headquarters for a Panhandle-wide health service center.

Dr. A. M. Donnell Jr., director of the office of program planning and evaluation for the Texas Department of Health Resources, said the group will eye facilities available in both cities for location of the center headquarters.

The team, appointed by the state board, will consist of an engineer, a physician and a financial expert, Donnell said.

Once their survey of available headquarters sites is completed, he said, they will report their recommendations for location of the headquarters to the state board for final decision.

If the facility locates in Canyon, it could mean the location of 30 or 40 professional persons here.

Five doctors with the TDHR visited Canyon in mid-June to take a tentative look at the possible facilities for the center offices.

City gets 'A' rating on civic complex bonds

The City of Canyon received an A bond rating last week from Moody Investment Corporation for the issuance of $500,000 in general obligation bonds to finance construction of the city hall complex.

City Manager Glen Metcalf said he's "very satisfied with an A" rating. "It shows Canyon is in a very stable financial condition and they feel we're able to handle the issue," he said.

The city had received an A rating several years ago on water bonds.

With the rating, city commissioners are ready to issue the bonds, which will be financed over a 12 year period.

Metcalf said the city plans to reduce the principal of the bonds by $120,000 on Aug. 1, 1976, and will end up financing only about $380,000 over the full period. Even then, the financing schedule will allow the city to pay off the bonds within 10 years rather than 12 years, he said.

He said the city will save about $60,000 in interest by making the $120,000 payment next August. The funds will come from federal revenue sharing sources.

Metcalf went to New York for the rating Monday with city financial advisor Bob Davis of Columbia Securities.

County puts cart before horse in setting taxes

If committees are the bane of the strange genre of democracy now maturing in the United States, the county commission is the ultimate committee, incorporating as it does some of the most untenable traits of all committees.

Example: Randall County commissioners spent 7½ hours Friday going backwards to achieve some semblance of solvency.

The chronology of the 1976 budget fiasco is important. The fiasco really began a year ago when commissioners decided to become truly involved in the budget-making process for the county. In early July 1974, before they even knew or had an inkling of what expenditures would likely be for 1975, the commissioners raised taxes in an illegal move.

Then, in August, still unsure of the true expenditure forecast for 1975, they prepared a budget with fairly accurate predictions of anticipated revenue. But, they came up with an expenditure budget which would put the terms "wishful thinking" in the lexicon of understatement were they not charter members. To say the least, the commissioners pulled from the air a budget which was erroneous — to the tune of an anticipated 18 to 20 per cent cost overrun this year.

Not wanting to repeat the same error two years in a row, commissioners went into this budget-making period with a zeal which can only be commended, but without experience to guide them into the fiscal foray.

Within an hour after beginning their marathon budget session Friday morning, commissioners had decided to set the tax rate for Randall County taxpayers for 1976 at $1.05 per $100 on 25 percent of valuation. The figures represent a 50 per cent hike in taxes for the county resident or business owner.

The interesting thing about the commission action on the tax increase is that it came before — that's right, before — they had determined with some assurance of accuracy what the total expenditures of the county would be for 1976.

The action taken to set the tax rate was action from hunch not knowledge. It was the action of an untutored committee.

Commissioners believe the tax increase will give the county revenues totalling more than $1.7 million for 1976 — a healthy $400,000 increase over 1975 estimated revenues.

But, when they left the commissioners courtroom at 5:15 p.m. Friday, they had only scant idea how much the various functions of county government would cost for 1976. The costs could range from $1.55 million to $1.65 million, but it is more than passing strange administrative procedure to set taxes and then spend to meet the level of increase.

In all this, commissioners overlooked a basic flaw in their newfound zeal to participate in the budget-making. Someone must oversee the budget, must ensure that the various county departments live within their budgets.

For too many years — and 1975 was a classic — the Randall County budget has simply been a ballpark figure and county department heads have not felt restrained from going over by a little or a lot the figure set in the budget for their expenditure totals.

If the commissioners are truly to become involved in the budget for the county, they must not be involved only during July and August when the fiscal matters are foremost in their minds. They must call to task those departments heads who fail to live within the budget restraints.

They must also examine their own role in the budget process, assess those things which typify good management — that is, management which is undertaken in the interest of the taxpayer — and carry out their role in something more than a whip-stitch fashion.

The credibility of the county commission is strained to the breaking-point by cart-before-the-horse sessions like the one held Friday.

Postal service example of bad bureaucracy

Whether or not U. S. postal workers walk from their jobs Monday on strike for better benefits and higher pay, the latest fracas between workers and management points up some of the basic problems with a government bureaucracy which epitomises all the things wrong with government bureaucracy.

The all-encompassing problem with the U. S. Postal Service is that it is a government bureaucracy, owned by and allegedly operated for the public.

But, the postal service has come to be a classic case for study by those in our colleges who like to study the sociology or functioning of large-scale organizations.

The postal service (and the noun is used only loosely) is a mess.

Workers even in Canyon, some of whom have become surly and righteous as their work has become slovenly and slow, call for higher and higher wages from a system which faces bankruptcy supported by taxpayers who themselves are not far from the breadlines.

Even though the postal system is a classic bureaucracy it is interesting, too, because it is a full-blown manifestation of the kind of havoc thoughtless governmental decrees can bestow on institutions public and private.

It has been said, for example, the postal service is a prime example of the problems inherent in the federally-mandated affirmative action program, when the untrained and unskilled are hired to perform only to become ungrateful and entrenched.

The postal system is also a prime example of the abuses which can result — and eventually will result wholesale — from the federal civil service system, which mandates that employees are virtually tenured for life or for 20 years on the job. The most insubordinate, the most unruly employees must be retained and the result, as the postal service indicates, is chaos.

All of which would be largely irrelevant were the postal system not so much a part of every American's life.

A good deal of America's information is passed through the mails in the form of books, magazines, newspapers and other reading matter.

The postal service shares with AT&T a virtual monopoly on interpersonal communication.

The postal service is necessary but must it be a necessary evil?

The time is overdue for the government to make the dramatic step in allowing the postal service to be operated either (a) by private enterprise, or (b) with employees deprived of the federal civil service sanctuary.

—C.W.

A post(al) script

While we're on the subject:

The U. S. Postal Service is trying to save itself from the brink of fiscal disaster with ever-higher postal rates. But, the administrative law judge of the Postal Rate Commission recently recommended some increases which could cause more damage to the flow of information in America than the indolent among the employees is already causing.

The judge proposes, according to the Magazine Publishers Association, a reduction from 10 cents to 8½ cents in the price of the first-class stamp.

While the stamp buying consumer may hail the idea as a good one, he should be aware that the judge wants the loss in revenue made up by large increases in the costs of mailing magazines, newspapers, books and packages.

The MPA says the plan would mean a reduction of $900 million in the first-class revenues — while the U. S. Postal Service currently faces a $1.6 billion deficit.

Newspapers and magazines which are sent through the mails would help make up the deficit. For a weekly newspaper the increase in postage rates would be 250 per cent. Book rates would rise by about 96 per cent and daily newspapers and magazines by about 121 per cent.

Newspaper and magazine editors throughout the land have known for years that the major coercive power the U. S. government has over the free press is through the mailbox. Postal rates which are inordinately high can substantially decrease the chances of survival for informational media.

The results are obvious and odious.

Must the government breed intellectual bankruptcy as it oversees the institutional bankruptcy of the postal service?

By CARROLL WILSON

Is there a rational basis for enthusiasm of the kind exhibited during the past week by television personalities and newspaper headline writers over the space meeting of Soyuz and Apollo?

Does a mere handshake and the linking of mechanical objects in the upper reaches of the atmosphere change the very opposite nature of each of the political systems the two spacecraft represented?

I think not — on each count.

If the space-mating opens a so-called "new era" of relations between the Soviets and the U.S., can the U.S. expect to gain from the new era or can it expect to lose?

So radically different are the assumptions of the two political systems that the U. S. can hope only to lose in any new push for massive detente.

Some observers have said with glib enthusiasm that the space link-up will open a new era of detente with the U.S. and Russia exchanging more and more scientific and technical information.

Based on past experience with the Soviets, an increase in the manner of detente is undesirable if not downright irresponsible.

The reason is this:

There is no visible or obtainable evidence that the Soviets have abandoned their basic assumptions about economic systems and the nature of man.

There is no evidence, for example, that the Soviets have let go of the Krushchevian epithet "we will bury you." It is the essence of communism that the proletariat will eventually — and under Leninism by force — overthrow the bourgeoisie. The Soviets believe they epitomize the essence of communism and are thus the true proletariat which will carry out the Marxist dictum.

It is also of the essence of communism that the U. S. epitomize the Marxist bourgeoisie.

Thesis and antithesis and never the twain shall meet.

Apparently the communists in Russia have sublimated the tacit assumptions of their political heredity so the twain shall meet.

Why?

One can only speculate that governments, like people, lie with thieves only when lying with thieves is of some benefit.

It would be nice to think that the reason we lie with the Soviets — and the reason they lie with us — is to avoid nuclear holocaust. That idea, in fact, appeals to a great number of American policy-makers, who fail to see that if the fear of nuclear holocaust can be used by the Russians to bringing the U. S. to detente it is almost as powerful as the weapons systems themselves.

America has reacted to that fear with detente and until this summer has quantitatively gained about as much as could be expected.

The Soviets, too, have gained. And, the Soviets have much more to gain through a "new era" of detente than do the Americans.

The prospect for increased scientific and technical aid, no doubt, will titillate the Soviets, for they only can gain from such an increased exchange.

Through detente America has elevated the Soviet Union to a standing as equal, has offered much while receiving little — except an assuagement of the fear of nuclear war — and has failed to see that, at its roots the communist system can only use detente to bring down the eventual downfall of the bourgeoisie.

A bridge to friendship for America becomes a tool for assault and battery in the hands of the Soviets.

America cannot benefit from a new era in detente, an extending of what should be only a cool relationship at best. Detente has gone far enough.

A handshake in space is good copy, but it should not convince us that the nature of Soviet communism has changed.

Respect keeps couples together

By Ann Brown

Of the thousands of American couples who march sedately to the altar with stars in their eyes, about a third of them will storm into the divorce court with fire in their eyes.

Why this tragic waste? Surely few young couples marry with any intention of being divorced.

There are probably no two people on earth whose love is strong enough or who are sufficiently committed to each other to keep a marriage together.

As the closest human relationship possible, marriage places a terrific strain on the nerves and patience of both parties.

It takes much more than a commitment to marriage.

It's doubtful if any married persons, regardless of their love for their mates, have not at times seen someone else who attracted them.

A faithful spouse does not remain faithful necessarily because of love for companion or lack of attraction elsewhere, but because of self respect, and respect for the marriage vows.

The philanderer lacks respect for self, companion, children, parents, friends, society, and Creator. Philandering eventually brings pain and shame to everyone of them.

Much dissatisfaction with marriage, the home, and life in general is the result of the wrong concept of the happiness of others.

No marriage is perfect. Many people learn to be happy without perfection; others mask their unhappiness with a smile.

Statistics indicate second marriages are more successful than first marriages. That does not necessarily mean they are happier. But the principals involved have learned, as a rule, that divorces create more problems than they solve.

There is an Arabian proverb which says, "All sunshine makes a desert."

To expect any relationship to be all sweetness and light is unrealistic. Sickness, sorrow, and disappointments are common to all.

A friend (no one should marry anyone who is not first of all a friend) is not necessarily one who comes to you when you are in trouble, but one to whom you can go when he's in trouble.

Weathering troubles together is the mortar of marriage. Question the happiest couple you know who are celebrating their golden wedding anniversary, and ask them if their marriage has been all sunshine.

Life is never completely happy in the single state. Why anticipate it in marriage?

But marriage is a divine institution. To expect the home to be happy without following divine directions is about as unrealistic as it would be to seek the scenic beauties of Texas using a California road map.

The most essential ingredients to a happy marriage are not health and wealth, but the ability to control one's tongue and temper.

The spoken word can no more come back than the sped bullet or time that is past. Cruel words can cut deeper than a knife.

Religion that does not affect one's temper doesn't do much for the soul either.

One popular misconception of marriage is that it is all a matter of luck. Perhaps. But that depends on one's definition of luck.

The "lucky" marriages are the ones where husbands and wives have not hesitated to endure hardship and privation. They have devoted days and nights to work. They have kept appointments as faithfully with each other as with friends or business associates. And they have dutifully discharged their obligations to their home.

The home is God's greatest earthly gift to man; happy is he who makes the most of it.

UMBARGER — A German Settlement in the Texas Panhandle

In the 1850's the Panhandle was still the domain of the Comanche Indians who freely roamed the vast expanses of this prairie and sought refuge in the Palo Duro Canyon from the vicissitudes of nature and the intrusions of the White man. It was a land where the sky embraced the earth in perfect harmony; where the graceful antelope — with a watchful eye for the marauding mountain lion — shared the domain with the wild mustang, the buffalo, the coyote, and the ever-present jack rabbit and prairie dog; and it was a land where the howling blizzards of the Winter, the mighty wind and rainstorms of the Spring, the scorching heat of the Summer, and the balmy Autumn days vied for supremacy. But it was man who wanted the last word in this regard, the restless settlers from the East and the immigrants from far away countries who hungered for freedom and better economic opportunities for themselves and their children.

For decades to come, it was a hard and lonely life for the early settlers most of whom had no knowledge of dry-land farming. Even the cattle ranches barely subsisted and improved only after wind-mills were introduced in 1887 drawing water from the ground to prevent the cattle from dying of thirst. No wonder that many hundred of nesters who at first were eager and enthusiastic, soon abandoned their claims and headed their wagons back home. The following information chalked on a board nailed across the door of a deserted house was quite indicative:

"250 miles to nearest post office; 100 miles to wood; 20 miles to water; 6 inches to Hell. God Bless our home. Gone to live with the wife's folks."

This is the setting of our narrative about the small but unique German immigrant community and its people who, in spite of all adversities, made a go of it by hard work and sheer determination. Umbarger today is a proud and flourishing agricultural community, distinct in its heritage, tradition and culture and yet, part and parcel of a great Nation which asked little and gave much to those who came to her for help.

After the last major Indian threat in the Panhandle plains was eliminated 1874 by the troops of General R.S. Mackenzie, US Army, who corralled the Comanches at the junction of the Tule and Palo Duro Canyon and placed them on reservations in Oklahoma, and after the cowboys at last began to tolerate the advance of nesters streaming from the Eastern states, a man, probably in his fifties, by the name of S.G. Umbarger, braced the loneliness and emptiness of the vast prairie and obtained a section of land in the area which later was to be named after him. For three cents an acre per annum he leased this land in 1895 from the Houston and Great Northern Railroad Co. and moved there with his family from Canyon City where history places him in 1891. Being located near a cattle trail leading to Kansas City, he took advantage of the situation and built a wagon yard with several sheds where travellers could obtain spare parts, exchange horses if need be, and rest a while. He prospered through farming and ranching but as fate had it, his wife Sena A. Umbarger died in 1899 and a year later, S.G. Umbarger moved agreed to allow D. A. Randall Sherrod to hire an investigator for his department with federal funds providing his salary for a two-year period.

TREASURER—Commissioners put the axe to a 43 per cent salary hike request by Treasurer Bob McClendon. McClendon's budget request for 1976 was 100 per cent over the 1975 total. Commissioners approved a budget total of $12,791 for his office. He had requested a budget of $22,356.

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE #1—J. P. Bill Wilson had asked for a salary increase of 25 per cent but the increase was trimmed to six per cent. With the six per cent figure rather than the 25 per cent figure Wilson's budget will total about $25,000.

TAX ASSESSOR—Commissioners tentatively okayed a budget of about $305,500, including $53,000 for personnel and equipment to continue a mass county reappraisal effort.

COUNTY CLERK—Commissioners okayed a budget of about $98,000, including new microfilm equipment.

COUNTY JUDGE—Commissioners okayed a budget of $21,600.

In other areas, commissioners added $60,000 for adult probation officers in Potter County, $10,000 for participation in the Canyon Ambulance Service and $15,000 for construction of a county road.

Other county department budgets were not considered during the meeting.

Gary Phillips, 16, and Mike Hernandez, 15, both of Canyon escaped serious injury Thursday afternoon when the van Phillips was driving went out of control and turned over in the 200 block of 6th Ave.

a population of 25,000 and provides 18 tennis courts, 15 baseball diamonds and are currently purchasing a 1000-acre park. Currently, the city has one large park and 13 neighborhood parks.

OLTON—With a population of 1782, Olton has five tennis courts, three baseball diamonds and an annual budget of $3000 for parks and recreation.

Langen compared those figures with similar data from Canyon. With a population of about 9600, Canyon has no city-owned tennis courts, four baseball diamonds, one park and an annual parks and recreation budget of about $23,000.

Langen said he will present the comparative analysis to city commissioners Monday night with the hopes they will see Canyon is far behind its Panhandle neighbors in providing parks and recreation facilities.

Then, he said, he will ask commissioners how much they can give to upgrade the parks facilities.

Don Dolle of the Soil Conservation Service presented a map of the area proposed by Langen for park expansion — an area running west of Conner Park along Tierra Blanca Creek and south of Canyon High School.

Dolle estimated it would cost about $7000 to move dirt in the areas to provide for four baseball diamonds, six tennis courts and a football practice field.

Other cost figures presented during the Thursday session included about $60,000 for tennis courts, and about $14,000 each for baseball diamonds.

WTSU officials are still awaiting word from the Governor's office on a request for special emergency funding for rehabilitation of the building.

The university asked for $392,000 to rehabilitate and make safer the structure.

Texas legislators gave the coordinating board power during the last session to pass on all construction projects on college campuses.

WTSU regents had already approved the project and told architects to seek bids for the construction itself.

The new facility, which will be located just south of the university complex south on campus, will house the university art department, music practice rooms, recital hall, and various other departments and functions.

The Kitchen Sink

By SUSAN WILSON

BY SUSAN WILSON

Everyone's worried about his identity these days. Especially women. They worry about career or home or both and even though what you do has little to do with what you are, people are identified in categories.

Even me. I tried to pin down my true identity recently when D'Arcy came home from nursery school and asked what I was.

"Well," I said, "I'm a homemaker and I'm your mommy."

"What else?" she persisted. Up to now that answer had done just fine, but I searched for a more elaborate answer: "I'm Julie's and Rebecca's mommy, too, and I'm Daddy's wife and I'm a Sunday School teacher."

"But what do you do?" she asked. "My friend's mommy is a policeman! Don't you do anything like that?"

"No," I said almost apologetically. "I don't do anything like that."

"Hmph," she shrugged, turning toward her room. "I guess I just don't have a very neat mommy."

To my five-year-old I guess just being a mommy is a pretty vanilla affair.

But, that's what I am, without a doubt, and the evidence is clear even when I'm nowhere near my children.

Like the time my husband and I took out another couple to this fancy restaurant in Indianapolis. A long-faced waiter gently placed the French onion soup in front of me and my husband.

"Try your soup," I said with a motherly smile. "It's nummy-num."

He stopped me just short of cutting up his meat.

When I drive a car, my right arm shoots out on impulse on sudden stops to keep the kids from flying into the windshield — much to the wonderment of the patrolman giving me my driver's test.

I have a built-in timer and every 15 minutes, no matter who's present, I ask like an automaton if anybody needs to go tinky in the potty.

When shopping for clothes, I ask for "something that blends well with spitty up."

While the rest of the world has been scared silly by "Jaws," I've cried over the loss of Bambi's mother. The most titillating thing I've seen on the silver screen was a little girl hugging Benji.

I wear a diaper pin brooch with everything.

Friends without children tell me of the works of Jacqueline Susann. I have memorized a wonderful little book which begins "This is my house and I am the Mommy. My children are Annabelle, Betsy and Bonnie. They are good little children and do just as I say. I put on their coats and they go out to play."

I know I'm a mommy because the other evening when we had some friends over for a later dinner without the kids, I played a tape of D'Arcy and Julie singing the Micky Mouse Club song.

Poor hubby. I am a constant embarrassment to him. It's just that it is difficult to drop a role I play 24 hours each day.

One evening when he was hobnobbing with some of our city's finest, I pulled him aside by saying: "Tell your little friends bye-bye now. It's time to go." I was lucky to live through that one.

Everywhere I go, I end up taking something home to the kids.

I take little plastic animals on cocktails, swizzle sticks and pretty napkins. At a Chinese restaurant I took the chopsticks and my fortune cookie. At weddings I take rice and a piece of cake.

Why, when I came home from the hospital I brought the kids a veritable treasure-trove, a wash basin, soap dish, pitcher, kup emesis basin and bed-pan.

When I bake bread, I make two big loaves and three tiny ones — for tea parties.

Strangers driving by my house can tell I'm a mommy. Some folks have lawn furniture gracing lush green lawns. We have two tricycles, one wagon, and an assortment of dolls and stuffed animals tossed around the almost-grass.

My correspondents can tell I'm a mommy because all my letters have squiggly marks on them. Many of my checks are written in green crayon because it's all I can find.

My purse contains disposable diapers, crayons, plastic toys, kleenex, diaper pins, a little purse, but no pennies.

The grocery sacks I once dreamed of filling with the makings for lobster thermidor, chocolate mousse and paella are full of strained veal, Kool-aid, Jell-o, and Crispy Critters.

Some people plan vacations around romantic evening spots. Our vacations are planned around zoos, amusement parks and Grandma.

Other folks hang fine art on their walls. I have crayon and peanut butter originals.

Yep, I'm a mommy. It's a permanent condition, but hubby and I realize that this fun part is only temporary.

Will we miss waking up at 6:30 a.m.? Will we miss plastic cups? Will we miss strawberry jam smeared on the TV screen for a kiss for Cappy Kangaroo? Will we miss all the mess?

Yes, we will. Terribly.

back to Canyon City.

In 1899, another man in his forties was prospecting for land in the Umbarger area. What he saw pleased him but it was a lonely territory. He could ride for miles and only jack rabbits and prairie dogs kept him company.

To bring a family here was not too inviting; back home, in High Hill near Schulenburg, Texas, at least you had close neighbors around. Intrigued and yet undecided, he left, only to return in 1902. In the meantime, the land had risen in price, from one dollar to $2.50 and more per acre, but so what, it was still cheap. So it happened that Pius Friemel with his family and brother August Friemel settled down in a place which was to become a thriving German settlement.

Others were there before him like S.G. Umbarger, R.E. Muncy, L.E. (Doc) Simms, John Hutson, M.M. McGee, L.G. Conner, John A. Wallace, James and L. Hutchinson, W.R. Bates, Mr. Cotchell, and section hands from the railroad. Most of them, however, were interested only in land speculation and moved on as soon as they made a good bargain. In this sense, the Friemels might be called the first real settlers who intended to stay. Indeed, Pius lived in Umbarger for 43 years before he died on June 5th, 1946.

The historical accident of Catholic missionaries and colonizers like Father Reisdorf — who also was a German — in conjunction with land companies who saw in German settlers a better than average risk for their investments, made it possible that Umbarger became a German-Catholic settlement.

In the years following the turn of the century, other German settlers came like the Enges, the Beckmans, Bedens, Hollensteins, Hess, Straubs, Franks, Erdmans, Batenhorsts, Stockers, Hartmans, Fischbachers, Wiecks, Irlbecks, and many others. These families carried on from there by getting their own relatives and friends from the old country; by marrying largely into other families within the community or into German-Catholic families of nearby communities like Nazareth, Hereford, etc.; and by adhering closely to customs and traditions of their forefathers.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE CANYON INDEPENDENT SCHOOL SYSTEM, THE AMARILLO INDEPENDENT SCHOOL DISTRICT AND THE CITIZENS OF THE AREA THAT ARE CONCERNED ABOUT THE STRENGTH AND GROWTH OF THE AMARILLO - CANYON AREA

We the undersigned members of the Texas Panhandle Builders Association want to express our thanks to the area newspapers for presenting the story of the conflict between our local school districts. In so doing we believe that the people are now aware that no more vacant land for development in the Southwest area of Amarillo lies in the Amarillo Independent School District.

As a builder group this is an urgent problem because this is the obvious residential growth area of the City. We are going to be able to furnish housing in this area for a short period only, without running into a serious lot shortage. We realize that long range planning is necessary and if immediate action could be taken on some land in the northern Canyon School District then adequate time could then be taken for the long term solution. We recommend that the Canyon and Amarillo School Districts get together and work out something now. The support of all the people in seeking the answer is highly important.

Looking forward to a congenial, swift settlement of the building industry and school districts problem, we remain

Respectfully yours,

The county winner in the senior division has been an active 4-H member for eight years and is a member of the Randall's 4-H Club. At the District I Dress Revue on July 29, Miss Hales will be competing with other senior winners from throughout District I and five of the senior division district winners will be selected to model their fashions at the state 4-H dress revue to be held in conjunction with the Texas State Fair this fall in Dallas.

Dress revue participants are scored on the basis of 100 points with 50 percent given on the fit of the garment and fashion modeling, 25 percent on construction of the garment and 25 percent on the individual's 4-H clothing record. Theme for the District I Revue on July 29 will be "Bicentennial of Fashion."

Also representing Randall County at the District I Dress Revue will be the two 4-H seamstresses selected as junior division winners on Thursday at the county dress revue which was held in fellowship hall of the First Presbyterian Church in Canyon.

Wheat Report-1975

New Harvest: During recent weeks the harvest of more than 680 million bushels has been underway in the five major wheat states served by Santa Fe. That's almost half of all the winter wheat grown in this country.

Car Supply: Santa Fe's part of the harvest job will be about 29,000 carloads. Our fleet of jumbo hoppers along with regular hoppers and box cars are now rolling throughout the harvest areas handling this big load.

Santa Fe Operations: The millions invested each year to improve Santa Fe's facilities, cars and locomotive fleet, makes it possible for us to get the job done in the most efficient way. We are ready to do even more than our share in wheat-growing states along the Santa Fe where problems may arise from inadequate transportation services.

Under normal conditions the railroads plan their operations to move with the harvest as it advances across the wheat belt.

This year, old man weather has upset the timetable. Rain has delayed the new crop about two weeks, and the wheat became ripe and ready in all growing areas of the Midwest, at the same time!

Santa Fe has a long and proud record of moving wheat. We do our best to prepare for each year's harvest. For example, we have almost 13,000 jumbo hoppers in service, including 1,000 brand new ones just received from the builders. That's the largest fleet in the nation.

1975 will be a near-record wheat harvest year along the Santa Fe; and, although the weather has created problems, we are doing our best to move each bushel. We are about to complete the harvest movement, and we appreciate the cooperation of growers, shippers, elevator operators and government inspectors which has helped Santa Fe handle another big wheat job.

The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway
A Santa Fe Industries Company

Rail cost is only a thin slice of the price you pay for bread. It averages about—

1/2¢ a loaf

Moving wheat for making bread is an example of how a modern railroad handles volumes of foodstuff at low costs.

This is one way Santa Fe works to hold down the price of food where it counts the most for family shoppers, at the checkout counter.

Vocational Program Added

The Vocational Educational Department at Canyon High School will be adding another program to its curriculum when school opens in the fall. The new program is Industrial Cooperative Training and will involve individualized training in such trades as auto body repair, electrical work, machine shop work, floral design, meat cutting, refrigeration servicing, welding, brick laying, cement work and health related fields such as dental assistants and nurses aides.

Along with the new program, a new teacher has been added to the vocational staff at CHS to head up ICT.

Wallace Busteded, a resident of Canyon and a WTSU graduate, has moved to the Canyon school system after teaching two years at Horace Mann Junior High School in Amarillo and will take over the ICT program.

"These classes afford students of junior and senior standing both practical and theoretical training in a variety of trades and occupations," Busteded said. "Practical work experience is provided the student through part-time employment each day at some cooperating business or industry in the city," he added.

While in the program, the student attends regular school classes for half a day and works on-the-job during the rest of the day.

"Most people complain that, while kids out of high school can quote Shakespeare or work modern math, they aren't trained for any practical skill. Our goal is to give the student a skill which he can go out and use after graduation," Busteded said.

County's History Portrayed In Project

A large wall hanging depicting the history of Randall County from its earliest days to the present has been undertaken by the Canyon Fine Arts Club.

The project began last spring under the chairmanship of Claudia Neelley while Donna Umberson was serving as the club's president.

At present the progress of the wall hanging has developed to the beginning stage after months of creating the proper effect on canvas and the making of patterns. The wall hanging will be composed of appliques and stitchery and is expected to measure 5 1/2 feet by 8 feet and weigh approximately 150 pounds when stretched for hanging.

The wall hanging is being prepared as a bi-centennial project capturing the county's history and will be a decorative accent for the new Canyon City Library which is now under construction as a segment of the new City Hall.

Working with the chairman on the design committee are Anita Low, Ann Palmer, Charlotte Brantley and Mrs. Newton Harrell. Each of the committee members has designed and painted the various panels being used in the total hanging.

"Our real problems were in deciding what events to portray in the hanging and the things most noteworthy in the history of the county," stated the chairman.

Selected as the ten panel subjects for the overall wall hanging are the prehistoric and early day Indians who roamed the canyons amidst Buffalo herds; the conquest of Coronado; the early ranching efforts with longhorn on the T-Anchor Ranch; prairie fires encountered by the early county settlers; a 1906 setting of early-day Canyon; a segment on the farming industry of the county; the influx of education as portrayed by a panel showing the early day university administration building and the newer, the presentation of "TEXAS" which has been significant for the county; a panel of native and cultivated flora featuring yucca, wheat, and maize; and the fauna and geological structures of the canyons.

Fine Arts Club resumes monthly meetings under the presidential tutelage of Margaret Harper several of the club's programs will be devoted to the hanging. The project chairman will be giving programs on stitchery and applique designs of the panel for the club, and work will be conducted in committee groups throughout the fall.
